ASCS Today

By Tom Conrad

New Livestock Feed Program Available - ASCS will administer a new emergency livestock feed program. The 1977 farm bill, recently signed by the President authorizes the program.

Eligible producers may be reimbursed for up to 50 percent of the cost of feed purchased for their livestock. The County ASC Committee will determine individual farmer eligibility on a case-by-case basis. Prior emergency designation of the county from Washington is no longer necessary.

Previously, ASCS administered a similar program but received mission assignments from the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration (F D A A). The new program should result in better service to farmers since program decisions will be made at the county level rather than in Washington. Because the new program can go into effect on individual farms, it can provide assistance when only a few farms in a county have been affected by natural disaster.

Producers who have already received approval for emergency feed assistance are urged to contact the ASCS office to see if any adjustments may be required under the new law. Requests for assistance made earlier to FDAA and still pending will be automatically transferred to ASCS for action.

USDA Announced 1978 Agricultural Conservation Program (ACP) - The U. S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) has announced the 1978 Agricultural Conservation Program (ACP) which places increased emphasis on rural pollution abatement as well as soil, water and woodland conservation. The National Program, administered by ASCS will be funded at the $190 million level authorized by Congress; State-by-State allocations will be announced at a later date.

Under ACP, USDA will provide both technical and financial assistance to farmers whose land is a source of agricultural pollution or affected by wind or water erosion. ACP will emphasize providing enduring solutions to these problems. In a change from past procedure, local committees will develop a priority system for the identification and solution of conservation and pollution problems. Cost sharing under these priority systems may range up to 90 percent of the farmers' or ranches cost on the most critical problem. Previously, USDA provided between 50 and 75 percent of the cost of performance approved conservation p r a c tices. Payments under ACP remain limited to $2,500 per person.

A set of National practices has been developed that represents a wide range of conservation and pollution problem solutions. State and county ACP programs will be based on these National Practices, although additional practices may be developed at the local level to meet specific pollution or conservation problems.

State and county program development groups will meet to establish conservation priorities. Counties will then announce the date they will begin accepting applications for ACP.

Other details of the 1978 ACP include:

- Ineligibility of cost-sharing to establish the minimum protection required under the 1978 Wheat Set-Aside Program. However, cost - sharing may be approved for the more enduring practices on set--aside acreage.

- Greater emphasis placed on coordinating ACP with Section 208 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act concerned with ridding U. S. waterways and lakes of point and non-point sources of pollution.

- Offering multi-year of long-term agreements of either 3-10 years of 3-5 years with an option to extend up to 10 years.

Practices under the 1978 ACP fall into these six categories:

1. Prevention of soil loss from water and wind erosion.
2. Solutions to water conservation problems.
3. Solutions to water quality problems.
4. Conservation of soil and water through forestry.
5. Conservation of wildlife habitat.
